“ Dear Sandy and Family,

Bryan and I worked together for most of 30+ years at EUCLID, Inc. Losing Bryan is like losing a childhood friend.

From a business standpoint his sales presentations were legendary, and if anyone contributed any data in the least, he was quick to return with feedback, complete with haul studies and how we matched up against our most challenging competition.

His background as an engineer was so invaluable to help settle down this Warranty Manager when we had to up-the-ante to secure a quote. He'd say, "Let's add this warranty because I know our units can stand up to their duty cycle with minimum financial risk". We won a lot of quotes and Bryan was right the vast majority of the time.

On a personal basis Bryan always made sure to update me on the famous guys his brother Dale was making custom drums for. He was proud of his brother and family to be sure.

I know that Bryan is resting in God's Loving Arms.

“ My family and I lost more than a father. He was not perfect but he gave true meaning to the term Dad. He witnessed many of my firsts in life and taught me the importance of hard work.

As I got older my dad transitioned into more than just dad. He became my role model, best friend, biggest cheerleader and constantly told me how proud he was of me. He gave me discipline, kindness and love when I needed it. He never said no to the needs of our family. He was caring, to a fault, and always looked for ways to bring the family together.

Socially, my dad was a gift to everyone he met. He was a true leader. He couldn't help but be the president of some club or association. He was surrounded by friends, funny work stories (throwing frozen chickens out of airplanes), clam bakes, and I always wanted to be like him and earn his respect. He had the ability to make everyone feel special.

He never hesitated to help me with house repairs. He was fun to binge watch tv shows with (if he stayed awake that is). He was a true mentor to talk to over a piece of chocolate cheesecake or glass of Dewars/bourbon. I never got tired of his stories.

Most importantly he taught me the value of family and God. He loved my mother. He taught me how to forgive. He would selflessly reach out to see how I was doing...even when he was the one who might have needed an ear. He was a parent I found myself wanting to spend more time with as he got older.

He would often times tell us stories of when he was young and of his tough relationship with his own father. He wanted to be better. He worked hard at that everyday. Well dad...you succeeded and are loved very much. You are the absolute best.

Even though we are all devastated, I can't help but smile every time I think of him. I loved him so much and will miss our conversations. Thank you, God, for allowing me to have a father like him.
