“ Andy my first born son. I miss you so much! From the moment I saw you I was in love! The prettiest baby I’ve ever seen. You grew into a smart and willful child. Always pushing the boundaries. A master negotiator. I can go on forever describing you. But I wish I wasn’t using the past tense. I will love you for all of my days.

“ My condolences to you Michelle and your family. Although I never met your son, he sounds like such an amazing human being that touched so many lives. You are such a kind and caring person and it is obvious that you passed on those attributes to your son. I am so sorry to hear of this unbearable loss.

“ I watched Andy and Olivia while Andy and my Riley attended the South Euclid Co-op, a wonderful pre school. Such cuties- I have fond memories of both of them playing with my Riley and Rory. Michelle, I'm so sorry for your loss. I cannot imagine what you are going through.

“ I rented out my in law suite to Andrew some years back, my first close interaction with someone whom had mental health issues. That boy took me on some roller coaster ride adventures here in quiet Grand River. I got to know Michelle very well, and Chris somewhat also. I don't think he could have had better parents. He was always polite, nice, charming (& paid his rent on time 🥰) . Since that time, i have experienced people very close to me having depression and I ain't no psychologist but I think I found one common denominator in most all of them - lack of God in their life. We nurture our bodies, but our spirit needs nurturing as well. 🕊️💖 to you Michelle, Chris and your other two children. Hope to see you at the Celebration of Life. Michael M

“ The first news of Andy came with a bang. I was in Zimbabwe when Michelle sent the picture that shut down the internet for 2 days in our little village. He always had quite the impact without really trying. He always called me "uncle Eric" in an endearing way that just made me feel so special. Andy knew what he did and didn't like but always had this fun curiosity that led to so many great moments. I remember vividly the peacock chasing him in Waimea when Andy wanted a closer look. He brought us all to tears running for his life from the big bird with feathers on full display. He had such determination to open a coconut with a machete, spending hours in the backyard hacking away only to be one upped by the dog. He was even up to try Shawna's exotic cooking concoctions that were way outside of his comfort zone. Sometimes he even took a second bite! That smile became more elusive with age, but was really magical when it appeared. Really sad to be left with only memories. Rest easy kid. Uncle Eric loves you and will miss you very much.

“ Andrew was a kind soul. I knew him from Giant Eagle. I knew of the challenges he faced and when he came back from NC he would stop in, just to say Hi every so often. He looked good, he looked healthy and he was more outgoing then he had been before. It was great to see him getting on with his life. I saw him just last week. He was looking for some part-time work. Before he left, I gave him a hug, little did I know, that would be our last visit. That makes me sad beyond belief. It was too short a journey and I hope he is looking down and seeing the impact he made on others.
My condolences our with his family.

“ In the short time I got to spend with Andy, I really enjoyed his company. I appreciate that he didn't try to pretend to be what he wasn't - he told you if he didnt want to do something without being rude about it or making you feel bad. I think that's a skill that most people don't have and I value that - he knew who he was and he was always real. I will always remember that time he was visiting us in Hawaii and he ate the Noni even though i told him it tasted like dirty socks. His face when he tasted it still makes me laugh when I think about it. And then how he just spit it out and said, "Yep." Churro also sends condolences, remembering Andy as one of the few people on Earth who would have given her all the undivided love and hugs and pets, with a baby in the same room. I also remember when we visited him in Asheville when I was pregnant and we were trying to figure out what to do. After we asked him what there was to do and he said he didnt really get out much, we were like, well, there's gotta be fun stuff to do - what is Asheville known for? And he just goes "Beer." We all just looked at each other - I couldn't drink, he couldn't drink...it made us all laugh. We will miss Andy so much.
Love,

“ Quiet, reserved, respectful, observant...just a few words to describe Andrew. It took a minute, but he finally allowed me in. Once I earned his trust, he let me show him a few things; laughing, relaxing, responsibility, integrity, and discipline. He liked routine and did not care for anyone who tried to disrupt it. Andrew and I were opposites. I am animated while he was modest. My hope for Andrew was always to accept himself for who he was, differences and all. He will truly always hold a special place in my heart and will never be forgotten. This loss has effected a number of people due to the way he touched everyone's heart.
