“ Charlie and I knew each other for almost 60 years. He was my first friend. He and I were tight up to young adulthood when I moved away. I moved back here about 12 years ago. His mother was my favorite aunt, and we used to have the greatest conversations about the gender of God!

I visited Charlie as often as I could at Malachi House. I saw him and gave him a milkshake the afternoon of the day before he died, and told him that I had always loved him, which was so true. I will never regret that visit, as I believe it's the last family visit he had. Rest well, dear cousin... take your art and your mind to heaven and take off. You've earned your wings!
