“ There are soooooo many wonderful memories I have of Grandma. A lot of them were just her and I. I would stay the night and we would play beauty shop, stay up late and watch tv. Our trip to Detroit to meet my great Aunt Mertie. Grandma gave me a quilt that Aunt Mertie had hand sewn, now over 100 years old. Our trip to Indiana....which ended with the news of Paul's accident. We always said that we needed to make the trip again for closure....regretfully it never happened. Our trip to Gettysburg with my mom. The mini bike track around the garden, the pool, all those wonderful family cookouts outside (carrying everything out on the cookie sheets), the zip line, the metal slide that burned going down on summer days and of course Christmas Eve.....every year she said she wasn't doing it that year.....but she always did. This year will be the first without it. Telling Grandpa we were going to church on Sunday, just to have me run into the church to grab the bulletin and off to Fishers Big Wheel or another adventure. Going to Woolworth, there in Chardon or Newburys or York Steak House in the Great Lakes Mall. I would listen to her telling me about her life growing up...her first job and such. Helping her find her treasured photo albums and telling me all about her photos. We'd talk about everything. She taught me to drive in All Souls and told me who was buried where. The numerous cars she had...I don't remember what model, but one you had to start with a screwdriver. I remember going with her to Preston and getting her focus. She drove it a little on the test drive and then told me to drive it. I actually drove it home for her. We used to tease each other.....I would tell her she was babysitting my car and we would both just laugh. We had a lot of these types of moments. Shopping with her to get the upstairs furnished. Soooooo many memories that I will cherish forever, but the greatest of them all are just her and I together talking.

Oh and the strawberry picking at Patterson's. Always took me because I don't like strawberries and I picked them instead of eating them!

“ I got a memory for the cousins and George - Remember the time we went to the little store and bought smoke bombs. Then lit and threw one behind the stove and yelled fire and ran outside! Boy did we get in trouble for that one!
