“ I'm so sorry. I stumbled across this in the strangest way. You left way too soon Jo, I had no idea. But it sounds like you had a full and very blessed life. 3 children and 5 grandchildren! So hard to leave behind, they must have loved you very much. You know I had to read how many years you and Dan were married twice because it didn't seem possible.

I'll tell you a story that's one of those that just stays like a scene out of a movie in your mind.

We (your Dan & I) were coming down Danny Parker's driveway one day heading to Dan's car parked in the street. You were standing at the end of your driveway, all of 14 maybe 15 of age, hair in braids. I greeted you and you said something in your soft little voice, that I couldn't understand. . I went up to you and asked what it was. "I'm going to marry him someday" you said, motioning to my guy at the time. lol. I told him when I got in the car and we both laughed saying it was so cute.

But you were certainly right. 45 years!

Good for you both, I hope it was a sweet sweet journey. I hold no grudges or regrets.

It seems another lifetime ago now. I pray you rest in peace beauty. If you see Danny give him a hug from me! 💕 Dee

“ OLMC, hanging out at Intihar park, 16th birthday (shh), sneaking out, getting married, baby Justin, all the concerts Especially Zeppelin (Omg), the apartment (bottle rockets), playing cards at Weber, baby Dana, my Wedding, Sedona, our 1 and only girls trip at 40 to the Bahamas, no matter what we had fun and laughter. Nearest to my heart are the hours (days) we spent on the phone sharing life, family and relationships. In one of our recent calls you said "I always feel better after we talk" me too Joanne. No regrets, no faults. I will always love, cherish and miss you. Until we meet again. "You Do"???

“ Jo and I were best friends growing up. We had the same interests, the same friends and went to the same school. We looked enough alike that people would mistake us for each other. In high school, we wore our hair the same and pretty much wore the same glasses, so we went to the store and bought 2 matching outfits and wore them on the same days to school. We did fool a few teachers and a few friends which we thought was a hoot. Jo didn't ever want to grow up. She had this light childlike side that would come out on vacation and would get us all started acting goofy and childlike ourselves. She had her troubles as an adult but there were also good times. She has left our family physically but she will always be in our hearts and has left behind for us to cherish three wonderful children and 5 adorable grandchildren and I thank her for that. She will be missed.
