“ Joyce, to my best friend. No, to my sister I never had. We've been through everything for the last 53 years. From our crazy teen years to our 60's. We've laughed, we've cried, and I always knew after talking to you I would feel better with your caring words and support. My heart is broken. I will still be talking to you just like we've always done. Love You.

“ A good stepmom is not made she is built. She is built by the hardships of her role and by the lessons she learns through trial and error. She makes sacrifices others may not be cable of. She learns how to love in many different ways. And she gives. She gives her heart and her life to to making sure children she did not give birth to smile, have wonderful memories, and most importantly always feel loved.

Our hearts are heavy tonight, it took me many years to realize the sacrifice this loving woman made for our blended family. I will miss her checking on me and I on her. I will miss her laugh and sarcasm and sharp wit. I love you Joyce, thank you for being a wonderful mother when you didn't have to be. Baby Audrey gained another angel tonight and what a loving Ema to watch over her from above.
