“ Sweet Kyle.. You became such a wonderful young man. I remember the day your Mom told me she was pregnant with you. I was so excited and happy ... I went right out and bought her something pretty to wear for when her belly got bigger. What a blessing you were to us all. Give Mommsie 🙏🐰 a great big hug and kiss from me.. I'm so lucky to have you both as guardian angels. I love you sweet Godson ... Fly with the angels 💙✂️

“ I lost my husband a year and a half ago in a tragic car accident and was left to raise our three children alone. My daughter was three and my sons were five and six. We may never find the reason God takes husbands from young wives and dad's away from their kids. Life will never be the same. People told me I was strong and that things would be okay, as I'm sure your being told that too. Things aren't okay, things will be different always. In time you will learn to live again, never as the person you were when he was here but you do find strength to continue on without him. I am so sorry this happened to you and your children, I write to you because I've lived through the nightmare that I'm sure you feel completely alone in. Don't lose faith, we have to believe everything happens for a reason and God has a greater plan for us all. Don't ever stop talking about your husband with your kids, that's what will keep him in your home forever. I'm so sorry for your loss.
