“ Mr. I. was the perfect family man. He was also a great guy with a non-stop smile, who always had a story to tell. He was 100% devoted to his wife; I cannot remember a time when they were not together. He completely supported his son, Joe, and grandson, Joey in whatever many sporting event or other activity happened on that particular day, no matter if it was a weekday practice down the street in pouring rain, or a weekend playoff game In a snowstorm in another city. If he wasn't coaching their team, then he was sitting on the sideline with Mrs. I. and Aunt Judy. I truly believe we will all miss Mr. I. because we were all affected in some way by his infectious personality and his uncanny ability to listen to whatever we had to say. Heaven is now a better place because he is there, but I will miss him down here because it will be impossible to replace him. And, the world sure could use a lot more people like Mr. I.
