“ Dear Gretchen, Hiliary and Ingrid,

My heart aches for you. The loss of one parent is always sad, but to lose two parents in such a short period of time is unimaginable. I don't know the perfect words to comfort you, but please know that you all have my most sincere thoughts of love and sympathy at the loss of your beloved dad, Vic.

While I house sat for you, he would give me "to try out" his experimental brushes, and I would let him know if they worked and how good they were. My favorite one was the round magnetic one for getting rid of dust bunnies and cobwebs in ceiling corners, and basement beams. It was perfect, and I still have it! :-)

Your Dad was a unique blend of intellect, charm, strength and spirit. He will be remembered in many fond ways, especially for his love of all of you and your Mom, with an unbridled sense of loyalty and caring.

It is hard to know exactly what to say at a time like this, but please know I care and that you are in my thoughts and prayers.

In friendship and caring,

Michelle Odell

“ And did you know that Vic was a master at Trivia?
I watched “Jeopardy” many times at Hellriegel’s and when the final jeopardy question was answered, it was go find Vic and try to stump him with the question. Rarely Happened.
He was a well informed individual.
